"POLLY OF THE CIRCUS."

As a play, Frederick Thompson's production of Margaret Mayo's play, "Polly of the Circus," proved to have a humor and pathos that appealed and its publication as a story will but add to its popularity. "Polly" is the star rider of the circus the child of a long line of performers with a love for the work and excitement in her blood. She is without education, except as the old circus people have given her haphazzard instructions Fate decrees that one night she stumbles as she jumps through the hoops and is injured. The circus can-not wait for accidents, and she is carried to the house, which happens to be a parsonage, whose minister is young, handsome and unmarried. Here she is educated and remains until the busy-bodies raise a row, and Polly is told to go, but stays as the minister's wife. The title role is taken by Miss Edith Tallaferro, a most talented young actress.

The Century Magazine has plannet a very interesting year for 1909. A new novel, "Mr. Opp," by Alice Hegan Rice, author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "Recollections of Grover Cleveland," by some of his most intimate friends. Thompson Se ton, will continue his famous anima stories. Important musical interviews with most famous musicians; a group of papers on German cities; interviews with the German Emperor, and a score of the best short stories, will make the Century of 1909 one of the most popular in its history. The forth coming December number will con tain an article on the tariff by Andrew Carnegie, which will be of much in terest in view of Mr. Carnegle's connection with the steel industry, hither to one of the most highly protected interests.

"Murder will out," quoted the Wise Guy. "So will charity," added the Simple Mug. "A man can't give his money away and keep it to himself."

the most careful attention. In the former she wishes to look her best, for it is then that she meets her friends; and the latter must be chosen wisely, for all the world that passes her in the street may read at a glance whether or not she has good taste and an educated eye for color.

The regular inflor-made coat and skirt is always a safe choice, there is little room for individuality, while the cloth street gown offers every opportunity for original ideas.

The dress in the sketch is an excellent model for an early fall walking gown, and is just the thing to wear under a fur or heavy cloth coat in the winter. If one happens into a tearoom while downtown shopping, and slips off the heavy coat, a dress of this sort looks much more attractive than a plain shirtwaist and skirt.

The model shown is of navy blue sorge, braided with black silk soutache The sash is of black satin, faced with amethyst satin. The Oriental em broidery on the waist is done in black and gold. A delightful fresh and dainty touch is given by the little, hemstitched white lawn frills on the sleeves and lawn tucker.

Of all the costumes in a woman's a color that is beautiful, but not so wardrobe, the evening gown and pronounced that the woman herself street dress are the ones that receive and all her friends will tire of it after seeing it half a dozen times.

A model for an evening gown that combines all the latest features, and is at once practical and beautiful, is shown in the sketch. It is of that lovely new shade of gray satin-silver mist.

The hem of the skirt is faced with fiannel, to weight it, and give the long, clinging lines. The bodice and sleeves are composed of little hand made straps of the satin, on a founda tion of net, and edged with gray allk fringe. The long sash ends are of black chiffon velvet, finished with black tassels and lined with silver.

A cloak or wrap of some sort is in dispensable for evening wear. matter how lovely the gown or how many hours are spent on the colffure a woman will not appear well dressed in the evening if she wears a day coat Besides looking so much more dis tinctive, a regular evening coat has another advantage; it is cut and hung so that it will not crush the most delicate fabric worn under it. The lining is usually of a light color to protect the dainty gown.

Warmth should above all things be considered. One of the most unwise things a woman can do is to wear one of the fashionable low necked almost sleeveless ball gowns, and over that a light-weight wrap, often cut or the Japanese kimona lines, that never were intended for warmth. There real ly is not the least danger in wearing the thinnest of gowns if the wrap is warm enough. It need not be padded or heavy, but made of good winter material.—Boston Herald.

She must take the juice of at least two at every meal and these must not be sweet ones. She must also give up oil with her salad and substitute lemon juice for vinegar. She cannot have cream or sugar in her coffee and the coffee itself, save at breakfast, must give place to sugarless and milkless weak tea. She can have all the acid fruit she wants, but if it be stewed no sugar must be added. Grapes, peaches, melons, prunes and bananas are tabooed, as they are flesh producers. No cereals for her, no hot bread save dry toast, no pork in any form, no veal and no water with her meals, and just as little away from them as she can endure, mineral water being taken by preference. Dr. Weir Mitchell advocates copious draughts of skim milk for the safe reduction of flesh. He states if it be taken plentifully at and between meals it will positively cause a patient to lose half a pound of flesh a day. Baths must be taken in cold water and a hard flesh brush must be plied vigorously.-From the Housekeeper.

This woman says that sick women should not fail to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she did.

Mrs. A. Gregory, of 2355 Lawrence St., Denver, Col., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

Pinkham:

"I was practically an invalid for six years, on account of female troubles. I underwent an operation by the doctor's advice, but in a few months I was worse than before. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it restored me to perfect health, such as I have not enjoyed in many years. Any woman suffering as I did with backache, bearing-down pains, and periodic pains, should not fail to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

"The average American, it seems to me, if he considers the matter at all, gives only a passing thought to the resources of the West and does not stop to realize its enormous actualities—what already has been accomplished and what is yet to be done."

—Paul Morton.

The "West" I speak for, is the great Pacific Northwest, of which the marvelously progressive city of SEATTLE is mistress. I ask every ambitious, conservative man of the Central West to begin now to give some thought hither, where elbow room is so wide and opportunities so many; to this farthest West, so rich in natural resources, as yet unscratched; into which the rapidly swelling surplus population must flow—will want to flow. I want to send YOU particular information concerning the one greatest, inevitable fortune maker of all—Scattle Central Business Property. Please write to me now.
